Wowwee Robosapien is a refined combination of technology and personality. Robosapien is the first robot based on the science of applied biomorphic robotics. It is loaded with attitude and intelligence. Robosapien has full range of dynamic motion, interactive sensors and a unique personality. He is more than a mechanical companion -- he's a multi-functional, thinking, feeling robot with attitude!

Many people are enjoying this robot because of its versatility. It is able to pick up things and throw them; it dances, walks, runs and even gives high fives. It keeps tabs on your home and will alert you when strangers are coming up the walk. You can program 84 different movements into this robot and it will be a hit because it can do many things that other toys of its kind cannot do.

Wowwee Robosapien is a thing of beauty there on the shelf, but having woken up with a yawn, he is all action. He will also nod off and gently snore if the user does not show him any attention.

Once set in motion, it can walk, turn, pound and even lean. It dances, burps, does karate chop, and give a high five. Wowwee Robosapien is highly flexible, with joints that go every which way, yet very solidly constructed

The voice on the robot isn't too bad although it does sound more like a caveman. The box actually says that it speaks "fluent international caveman". At 12.5" tall it is safe to say that the WowWee Robosapien is the size of a superhero doll and could be a very popular toy for this Christmas.

Wowwee Robosapien is appealing because it can do so many things and it is lifelike. Wowwee Robosapien is, after all, a TOY; Not an industrial robot. It is a well designed toy for under $50. If you want a fun, multifunction, "talking" robot today, then this is the guy for you.
